APPENDIX C - COMMON DISABILITY ACCOMMODATIONS & MODIFICATIONS

Under fair housing laws, housing providers must accommodate the needs of applicants and residents who have disabilities. A reasonable accommodation is an adjustment in rules, procedures or services that gives a person with a disability an equal opportunity to use and enjoy their dwelling and common areas. A reasonable modification is a change in a dwelling or common areas (usually at the resident's expense) that is needed to live comfortably and safely. Do not ask applicants or residents if they have a disability, for details about the condition, or to see medical records. For an accommodation or modification, it is okay to ask for third-party verification that the person has a disability and that the request will address the person's disability needs. *

EXEMPTIONS TO FAIR HOUSING LAWS

Some types of properties, individuals and actions are exempted from coverage by fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act and most local fair housing laws do not apply –

- to religious organizations, associations, or societies, or any nonprofit institution or organization operated, supervised or controlled by one, which can limit the sale, rental or occupancy of dwellings which they own or operate for other than a commercial purpose to persons of the same religion, and can give preference to such persons (but cannot restrict on account of race, color or national origin).
- to a private club not open to the public which as an incident to its primary purpose provides lodgings which it owns or operates for other than a commercial purpose, which can limit the rental or occupancy of such lodgings to its members, and can give preference to its members.
- to rental actions against someone who was convicted by any court of competent jurisdiction of the illegal manufacture or distribution of a controlled substance.

Note about advertising – The nondiscriminatory advertising requirements apply even to single-family dwellings and to housing where the owner maintains a residence that might otherwise be exempt from the FHA.
